

The Athenian Mercury.

Saturday, September 29. 1694.

Quest. 1. Supposing Bodies to gravitate mutually one upon another, so that at different distances the Forces by which they tend one to another, be reciprocally proportional to the Squares of those distances, whether is a body more weighty when it is nearer, or when it is further from the Centre of the Earth?

Ans. Any one that knows the Inverse Rule of Three, will answer, That Bodies gravitate more near the Centre.

Quest. 2. A certain Gentleman in the C— of S— having a considerable Estate, and many children, Sons and Daughters, made his Will, and gave to his eldest Son 400l. per annum. and to the rest portions sufficient for younger children; Sometime before the Old Man's Death, the said Eldest Son marries to one of the Servants of the Family, against his Father's Approbation; But after the business was done, the Father was so far from diminishing his Son's Fortune, that with the consent of the rest of his children, he took 50 l. out of each of their shares, and gave to his said Eldest Son, because he had married a Wife worth nothing: The Father is since dead, and the Son has by his Frugality, made a considerable Addition to his Estate: I desire to know whether he is not obliged, or compellable by the Law and Rule of God and Man, Honesty and Honour, to return 50 l. to one of his sisters, who (being unfortunate in her marriage, is at present in a low and mean condition? Your Opinion may be very serviceable to the distressed.

Ans. There's no forcing him to't; but he's doubly oblig'd to relieve her, by the Law of Nature, as she's a part of his Family; and that of Gratitude, since she was willing to serve him, when it was only for his convenience: Therefore he'd be very base to refuse the assisting her in her Necessity. And these would be sufficient Motives to a man that is but morally honest.

Quest. 3. Which is the truest Church-man, he that observes all the Orders of It, in respect both to Doctrine and Ceremony, as frequenting, and being very devout at Common-Prayer, receiving the Sacraments, observing Baptism, &c. as by the Church commanded; yet maintains a correspondence and friendship with men of different persuasions? Or one that declares highly for the Church, but neglects, or very rarely performs any of these duties; and extremely exclaims against all men whatsoever that are of a contrary Opinion?

Ans. There's just as much difference between 'em as between doing or saying, only the first is, what we wish every one of her members were, true to his profession, and act as if he were sensible that Charity is Essential to Christianity; Nay, is more likely to gain Honour and Proselytes to the Church amongst wise men, than pure Bigottry will ever do. Whereas 'tis probable, that the last will only be able to maintain and keep up those prejudices that are too evident amongst us.

Quest. 4. From whence had Alexander's Horse the Name of Bucephalus?

Ans. Not as some have thought, because his Head resembled that of an Ox; but the Thessalians branding all those Horses that were strong, and well-shaped, with the figure of the Plant that the Greeks called Boucranon, Alexander's had the Name of Bucephalus from thence, as being one that excell'd all others.

Numb. 6.

Malbranche's Search after Truth (is now Publisht) being a Treatise of the Nature of the Humane Mind, and of it's managements for avoiding Error in the Sciences.

*ences, Vol. 1. Done into English from the Paris 4th. Edition, by Mr. Sault, Author of the New Treatise of Algebra. The whole Printed in Octavo, and reduc'd to a small price, that so useful a work might be fit for the Pocket, and be every body's Money. Several Gentlemen of the Universities of Oxford and Cambridg, have so highly approv'd this Translation of Malbranches Search after Truth done by Mr. Sault, as that it has greatly encouraged the Sale at Oxford and Cambridg, and occasioned the Undertakers to send great Numbers thither a second time, and to expedite the Publication of the Second Volume.—The Extraordinary Usefulness of this Work of Malbranches, may be seen at large in the Book lately Publish'd by the Reverend Mr. Norris, intitled, Spiritual Council, or the Fathers Advice to his Children.—where speaking to his Children he says: 'But if you would have a general Instrument of Knowledge, an Universal Key, a Book that will thoroughly Regulate, Order and Form your Understandings, and teach you how to use your Intellectual Powers, for the avoiding of Error, and conduct you in the Search of Truth, &c. In fine, If you would have a Book that is like a Library, and an ever rising and flowing Spring of knowledge, that ought never to be out of your Hands, but always to be read, studied, dwelt and fed upon, till it be digested, made your own, and converted, as it were into the very substance of your souls, let me recommend to you Malbranches Search after Truth, &c. For indeed to speak out freely what I think, I take it to be upon all accounts, one of the best Books that is in the World, and of all Human Compositions, there is none that does better serve the interests of Truth and true Religion.*

The Ladies Dictionary.—The Design of this Work is Universal, and concerns no less than the whole Sex of Men in some regard, but of Women so perfectly and nearly that 'twill be servicable to them, in all their Concerns of Love, Marriage, Business, Life, Houses and Conversation. It contains also a general History of Women, intermixt with much excellent Learning upon that Subject, unknown not only to Women, but to the greater part of men. But for Women, this Secret Oracle to consult upon all the Incidents of affairs even from Childhood to Old Age, for here is not only an Explication of that endless Jargon of Names, whether French, Arabick, or Heathen, that compose that learned System of the Attire and Dressing-Box; but it contains also many extraordinary Secrets communicated to the Author from private Hands. The Arguments pro and con in all the Disputes concerning the fair Sex are truly stated, and abundance of cases clearly and fully solved, that have hitherto tormented the Ladies. Here is also to be found the true Interpretations of Womens Names, with so plain a derivation of each name, that every ordinary Capacity may understand them. As for the Author of this Elaborate Work, he seems to be cut out on purpose for such a Business, for one may find him quite through the Book to be a man of great Experience in Female Affairs, and very well versed in the Mysteries of Love, Intrigues, Amours, and he hath done it with so much wit, with so smart and feeling an Air, whether he commends the Sex, tells a Story, or reproves a Vice, as shews him to have Commend'd Mr. of Arts that way: So that for a taste I refer the Reader to P. 314. where you have an Essay (by way of Paradox) to renew the first fashion of going Naked; to P. Where you have the Authors own Sentiments concerning Women, to P. where you have the new Project to provide maids with Husbands, to P. where you have the six Nights Ramble for the detection of Night-Walkers, to P. where you have an Ingenious Discourse upon Artificial Beauty, to P. where you have the Ladies Dressing-Room described, to P. where you have the Confessions of several Ladies, to P. where Topknots, Naked Breasts, Love-spots, Painting and Perruigs, are largely treated on, to P. where you have a Copy of the Jews Bill of Divorce, to P. where the Dunmow Custom is related, to P. Where Nuptial Ceremonies, Dowries, Presents and Ornaments are handled, to P. Where you have the Authors Thoughts upon Chastity, Platonick-Love, Jealousy, Unequal Matches, a Single Life, Singing, Dancing, to P. Where you have the Character of a Perfect Beauty: These are but some few of those many thousand entertaining Subjects, this Dictionary contains. Throughout the whole Work the Author tells you abundance of pretty Histories, and other remarkable Occurrences; and you may find here all the Humours of the Town at the bare expence of Reading, the Author has spent a whole twelve month upon this Enterprize, notwithstanding the Helps he hath had from others, which are also very considerable.

THE Second Volume of the French Book of Martyrs, is now Publish'd in English, with Her Majesties Royal Priviledge, and ready to be delivered to the Subscribers. The Third and Fourth Volumes are also preparing for the Press, and comprehend (with the two Volumes already published) all the Martyrdoms, &c. that have been in France from the beginning of the Reformation there, down to this present time.—This Elaborate Work has been Patroniz'd by the States of Holland; and her Majesties Royal License for the Printing of it, does not a little recommend it to the English Nation; and as for the Author of it, his Preface to the First Volume does yet promise fairer things, as his Correspondence for the carrying on so great a Work, extending to such distant places, his access to so many publick and private Libraries, as well as to the Cabinets and Studies of the exacter sort, where Fugitive Pieces secure themselves, his Assurances by Manuscripts and Collections, especially those of the Learned and Ingenious Mr. Jessereau, and the Memoirs he left at his Death; with other helps which will best appear in the Work it self; And surely it cannot be denied but that the Martyrdoms of the French Protestants is one of the most memorable Accidents that merits to be taken in hand, for the Information of succeeding Ages. It is not to be imagin'd (this Author says) what has past in France within these last 30 years; it was very necessary therefore to Establish things in their true Light, and to Collect in a History all the Martyrdoms and Persecutions of the French Protestants, for these last fourscore and ten years, we having as yet no faithful Collection of them any where extant.

Published from his Lordships Original Papers. Price bound 6 s.—As for these last Publish'd Remains of Bishop Barlows, that they are indeed, as the Title pretends, his Genuine Issue, besides the Testimony of the Honourable and Learned Publisher who attests them to have been Written under the Bishops own Hand, and many of them to himself; there appear such visible Features and Lineaments of their great Parent in all of them, that there is no room for any Judicious Person to doubt of the Legitimacy of their Extraction; neither are these Remains only Valuable for that great Learning that every where shines in them; but likewise for the delightful Variety and manifold and general utility of the Subjects they Treat of in Divinity, Philosophy, Law, History, &c. so that this Work is of use to all sorts of Students; for besides several points of Controversy, where the Questions (which was the Bishops chief Talent) are most accurately Stated, and perspicuously decided; here are many Casuistical Points, and Law Niceties, and Historical Doubts cleared up, with several curious Political Observations: So that altogether (as the Learn'd Mr. Woolley tells us) it may serve for one of the best Repertories, both of choice Books, and things that is yet extant.

The second Volume of the Post-boy Robb'd of his mail: or the Pacquet broke open, to which are added several ingenious Letters, lately sent to the Gentlemen concern'd in this Frolick: As also Copies of those private Letters which lately pass'd between — with observations upon each Letter. — This Piece consists of an ingenious Frolick, which appears so possible, and so like Truth, that hardly can any thing be liker, that is not really so, for the Author supposes a company of Will, but Witty, and not unlearn'd Gentlemen, meeting, by chance, with the Post on the Road (a thing not against the appearance of Truth, because it has de facto lately but too often happen'd) to have Robb'd him in a Frolick, and then going aside to one of their companions Country-Houses to have read the Letters, being in number 500, and Written from and to persons of both Sexes, influenc'd by all the different Humours, Passions, Inclinations and Occasions that can almost be at all imagin'd to occur to and in men, with most pleasant Remarks upon each Letter, and each Humour Painted in it. This piece sets before our Eyes the hidden Tricks and dark Intreagues of persons of all sorts, from the Noble to the Peasant, and in sum, all that can be imagined to have pass'd, or to be possible to pass in the Hearts of men. The First Letters of this Volume are Written by an Astutick, full of moral and extraordinary Reflections, couch'd in a stile fine and peculiar, to the Ingenious of that People, and in a Dozen Letters you may find all the pleasure of Variety; Nothing can be more fine than the Account of the quondam Camp at Hounslow Heath, except what follows, it being a Letter from a Sharper, Natural, yet Witty; nor is the next of Advice interior to any for moral Reflections; and nothing more delicate than the Letter of Compliments to the Lady A — In short there is an extream happy turn in all these Letters fill'd with uncommon Wit. The last Letter in this Book will gratify all the curious that love to read secret things, it being so well and genteely Penn'd, that the Wit and Language, as well as the Story, affords delight. Here is also inserted the Letters sent by a Gentleman to a Young Lady during a long Courtship; with the Ladies ingenious Answers to all his Letters; neither can any thing be more soft and languishing than these Love Letters that pass'd between Lysander and Belvidera and as Love was never more Evident in any than in these Letters, so was its Nature never better described than in the Comments. Here are found all the methods of Addresses, and the Arts to win the Fair; the want of knowing which makes so many Lovers sigh in Vain. In the Fourth Book, the History of Kissing is diverting and pretty, and the Account of the several Sects of Christians in all the World, is very impartial and concise. Nor can any thing be more surprising than the History of the English Beggars; nor less pleasant are those Letters of a Foreign Lady to her Gallant and to her Husband at the same time, cajoling both. The Letters of the 5th book were sent by several Ladies, with Remarks upon them, made by the Gentlemen concern'd in this Frolick.
